Burger King and McDonald's both were in the news this week for weird stuff. In this corner, a fast-food staple that will deliver to your door (in Chicago!). And in this corner, a worldwide brand sued for putting toys with its kids' meals. Here's the rundown. REUTERS, TRIBUNE, REDEYE

FAST FOOD

FACE-OFF

BURGER KING VS MCDONALD'S

Sound bite

Next time, the Whopper can come to you. Burger King on Tuesday announced it will launch delivery service in the Chicago area.

And we care because ...

The Miami fast food chain said delivery will be available from as many as 20 area restaurants. It plans to offer delivery starting during the next several months to Lincoln Park, Evanston, Skokie, The Loop, Cicero, Downers Grove and Logan Square.

Fine print

There's a minimum order of $10, and orders must be placed between 11 a.m. and 10 p.m. Delivery times and prices vary by location. Delivery is available at bkdelivers.com or 855-ORDER-BK (855-673-3725).

In case you missed it

Burger King offers delivery in New York, Miami, Houston and the Washington, D.C., area, and on Tuesday also announced plans to expand to L.A. and San Francisco.

Sound bite

The Procon consumer agency in Sao Paulo, Brazil, has fined McDonald's $1.6 million for targeting children with its advertising and toys.

And we care because ...

The action against the Happy Meal adds fuel to a global debate about fast food and public health. Much of the debate centers on how McDonald's and other fast-food companies market to children and other young consumers.

Fine print

While the initial fine may have little effect on the world's largest restaurant chain, the agency said additional citations could arise, more than doubling the cost to McDonald's. Consumer agencies in other jurisdictions could soon follow the precedent in Brazil's most populous state.

In case you missed it

The fine, announced on Monday, stemmed from a 2010 campaign offering meals with toys from the movie "Avatar" and a local TV series. A spokeswoman for McDonald's declined to comment on the case.

Women can kick comic butt too

Nikki Lynette

redeye@tribune.com
@nikkilynette

Every April since 2010, something awesome has happened in Chicago: McCormick Place has transformed into a realm of fantasy, superheroes and hella cool costumes known as C2E2 (that's Chicago Comic & Entertainment Expo, for the unaware).

C2E2 2013, which launches Friday, is a three-day convention dedicated to the worlds of comics, movies, TV, toys, anime and video games. There are hundreds of exhibitors and lots of celebs, many of whom speak on panels, sign autographs and take pics with attendees. It's cray.

I love cons (it's the nickname for "conventions"—try to keep up), but I'm annoyed that popular culture has given conventions the stigma of being all about dudes. I don't understand, not only because C2E2 has plenty of entertainment that appeals to both sexes, but also because they have amazing retailers selling tons of cool stuff. People must be buying into the cons' reputation as being all about men because every year I've attended C2E2, there have been way more guys than gals. There are so many reasons why more women need to hit up these conventions. Come on, ladies! You're missing out!

I am the type of girl who loves to wear clothes and jewelry that express my personal style and are different enough that everybody and their momma won't also have it. C2E2 is the perfect place to pick up stuff like that.

There are literally dozens of vendors selling comic-, movie- or TV-themed T-shirts, one-of-a-kind jewelry, handmade hats, and a ton of other fashionable finds that you could never get from a mall. (I'm not hating on Hot Topic,

I'm just saying.)

Last year I bought a Hello Kitty hoodie, complete with ears, and it came with a giant colorful nylon bag, free of charge! Freebies fill my heart with gladness and joy. And the prices for merchandise at cons tend to be reasonable because the vendors are competing with a dozen similar exhibitors in the same room. There's stuff for girly-girls, tomboys, oddballs like me and every variation in between.

In spite of being one of those angsty musicians who pretends to be too cool to watch TV, I secretly am obsessed with a few shows right now. If you share my obsessions, then you'll be happy to know that some of our fave femmes from the hottest shows will be in attendance. I'm talking Laurie Holden from "The Walking Dead," Natalie Dormer from "Game of Thrones" and Janina Gavankar from "True Blood." Badass female characters aren't male-oriented. Dudes don't own the copyright on everything awesome.

I must admit, the ratio of girls to guys at C2E2 has gradually improved during the past few years. It helps that Chicago has a group like Sugar Gamers that's all about exposing geek culture to girls who otherwise would give you the stank eye if you invited them to a comic book convention. Yet we don't have an equal female presence at cons. Let's change that.

I'm not saying every Chicago girl should dress up and cosplay as her favorite character at C2E2. I'm just saying that you wouldn't be alone if you did.

All things considered, I don't understand how comic conventions ever got the stigma of being guy-oriented. I bet that rumor was started by a chick who wanted all the cool tees and accessories to herself. Hopefully, I'll see lots of ladies there this weekend. Maybe we can shop together! That would be cray.

Social media users around the world

REDEYE ILLUSTRATION

27%

That's how much of our Internet time we in the U.S. spent on social media sites in 2012, according to a survey by Experian

Hitwise, a U.K. data collection and research agency.

The survey examined media habits among U.K. online users, U.S. users and Australians to determine where they spent the majority of their time online. Though U.S. users' time spent on social media sites is markedly higher than the others—22 percent in the U.K., 24 percent in Australia—that U.S. percentage actually is down from 30 percent in 2011.

Oh, and where else did we spend our time online? According to the survey: 15 percent on "entertainment" sites, 9 percent on "shopping" sites and 4 percent on "adult" websites.

Kennedy-King College went on lockdown Monday, but authorities said a report of an armed man was unfounded.

Timika Rutledge-German's 15-year-old son was killed early Tuesday morning in Kenwood.
HEATHER CHARLES/TRIBUNE

'He was still a baby'

Teen cried out for his mother before dying from gunshot wound

Chicago Tribune

Timika Rutledge-German finally accepted there was only so much she could do to protect her 15-year-old son from Chicago's dangerous streets, but when he called for her help, she knew she would go.

On Monday night, her son called her for a ride home.

Minutes later, as he lay dying from a bullet wound to the back, her son called out for her one more time.

"Call my mama," her son, Cornelius German, cried out, she later learned. But she could not help him this time. Her son was pronounced dead at 12:50 a.m. Tuesday at the Cook County Medical Examiner's office, and no one was in custody for his homicide Tuesday evening.

While his mother said her son had trouble in school and had friends who were gang members, he was still just a boy.

"He's still a 15-year-old kid," she said. "He was still a baby. He didn't deserve this."

German, nicknamed "Cornbread," was killed just four blocks from President Obama's Kenwood home, echoing the slaying of Hadiya Pendleton, an honors student, also 15, whose shooting in January in Harsh Park, about a mile north of the president's residence, brought international attention to Chicago's gun violence.

Cornelius German

His mother admitted her son rebelled against authority and hung with gang members, but she was unhappy that Chicago police had so quickly called her son a gang member.

"This is not Hadiya Pendleton. This is Cornelius German, a boy affiliated with gangs," Rutledge-German said. "Police can't say he was a known gangbanger. He hung with everybody because they were his homies."

Police officials said the boy had "documented gang ties." He also had a juvenile record that included arrests for armed robbery and findings of guilt for theft and battery, according to law enforcement sources.

Rutledge-German worried that her son's death wouldn't receive the same priority from police as Hadiya's murder because the boy lived in a tough part of town and had a more troubled past.

"I'm still in shock," she said. "I've shed a few tears, but not enough. I just can't accept it."

Wells St. Bridge closing again

By Tracy Swartz

REDEYE

The second phase of the Wells Street Bridge overhaul project begins late Friday, when the CTA will stop Brown Line train service over the bridge into the Loop.

Brown Line trains will be rerouted from Friday until the morning hours of May 6. There will be no Purple Line express service during this time.

Some Brown Line trains will turn into Red Line trains after Fullerton, while some Brown Line trains will terminate at the Merchandise Mart stop. There will be a special train circling the Loop during this time. There also will be shuttles traveling between the Merchandise Mart, Clark/Lake and Washington/Wells stations.

France legalizes gay marriage

1 France became the 14th country to allow same-sex marriage Tuesday after its parliament approved a new law championed by President Francois Hollande, but it came at a political price amid violent street protests and a rise in homophobic attacks.

Three charges dropped against abortion doctor

2 A Pennsylvania judge dismissed three murder charges Tuesday against a Philadelphia abortion doctor accused in a high-profile case of killing babies in what was described as a squalid clinic serving low-income women. Dr. Kermit Gosnell, 72, still faces charges of killing four infants and a woman who underwent an abortion and died at his Women's Medical Society clinic in urban West Philadelphia. He could face the death penalty if convicted.

Lawyer: Suspect's wife in shock

Tamerlan Tsarnaev

6 BOSTON The wife of the dead Boston Marathon bombing suspect is assisting authorities, and she is in shock that her husband and brother-in-law were accused of the deadly blasts, her lawyer said Tuesday.

Her 19-year-old brother-in-law, Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, who survived shootouts with police and has been criminally charged, was upgraded to "fair" from "serious" condition Tuesday at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, the U.S. Attorney's Office in Boston said.

Tamerlan Tsarnaev, 26, was killed in a shootout with police last week as authorities hunted for him and his younger brother.

A lawyer for Katherine Russell, 24, said she was busy caring for their 2-year-old daughter and working as a home health care aide in the time leading up to the blasts that killed three people and wounded more than 200.

"She is doing everything she can to assist with the investigation," the lawyer, Amato DeLuca, said outside his Providence, R.I., office. "The reports of involvement by her husband and brother-in-law came as an absolute shock to them all."

Russell, an American-born convert to Islam, is not a suspect. Officials have identified only the ethnic Chechen brothers Tamerlan and Dzhokhar Tsarnaev as suspects.

FROM THE HOSPITAL ROOM

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev told investigators in his hospital room he and his brother acted alone, without any help, according to reports by NBC, CNN and the New York Times. He said his older brother was the driving force behind the bombings, the reports said.

DeLuca declined to say which law enforcement agencies Russell had spoken with or what they have asked her. "It is pretty evident that she didn't know anything," DeLuca said.

"She cries a lot," DeLuca said. "She can't go anywhere. She can't work."

A total of 264 people were injured in the blasts, the Boston Public Health Commission said Tuesday.

Twitter hoax spooks financial markets

8 WASHINGTON Hackers took control of the Associated Press' Twitter account Tuesday and sent a false tweet about two explosions in the White House that briefly sent U.S. financial markets reeling.

In the latest high-profile hacking incident involving Twitter, an official @AP account reported that two explosions at the White House injured President Obama.

AP spokesman Paul Colford quickly confirmed the tweet was "bogus," but within 3 minutes of the tweet hitting the Web, virtually all U.S. markets took a plunge on the false news in what one trader described as "pure chaos."

White House spokesman Jay Carney told reporters that Obama was fine soon after the tweet went out a little after 1 p.m., and markets quickly recovered their losses.

A Twitter spokesman declined to comment on the AP breach, saying the company does not comment "on individual accounts for privacy and security reasons."

THEY'RE NOT PERFECT—YET

CUBS

Jeff Samardzija: 1 in 1,500

The former Notre Dame wideout probably has a better chance of catching the winning touchdown in the Super Bowl than throwing a perfect game, but his overpowering stuff likely means he is the Cubs' best opportunity at perfection.

Carlos Villanueva: 1 in 1,700

The big right-hander has enjoyed a hot start to the season, but not "perfect game" hot.

Edwin Jackson: 1 in 2,100

At 0-3, even a simple win feels far away for the Cubs' new acquisition.

Travis Wood: 1 in 2,300

Remember, this is Travis Wood, not Kerry.

Scott Feldman: 1 in 3,000

Right now he's allowing way more than a hit or walk an inning. Asking for none over nine innings is too much to ask.

With a little ... er ... a ton of luck, Chicago pitchers might make history this year

By Ryan Smith FOR REDEYE

Can anyone on the White Sox or Cubs be this season's Philip Humber?

Even though the journeyman pitcher tossed one of the most unlikely of the 23 perfect games in major league history for the Sox in 2012, the odds still are astronomical—about 1 in 20,000—and the North Siders have yet to notch one in their long and storied history.

2K Sports has us thinking about it because the company is in the midst of its Perfect Game Challenge, in which gamers have logged more than 500,000 attempts at flawless pitching performances to win a piece of a $1 million pie.

Because the best grades are awarded for perfect games achieved using the worst possible pitchers, thus increasing gamers' odds of winning cash, it's translated into flawless performances for nearly every starter in Chicago's virtual rotations (yep, including nine from Scott Feldman and six from Gavin Floyd). According to 2K Sports, Illinois gamers this year have tossed 55 perfect games, which ranks ninth in the country.

So let's handicap the odds of someone in throwing a real-life perfect game for a Chicago team in 2013.

RYAN SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

WHITE SOX

Chris Sale: 1 in 1,300

Chicago's flamethrowing lefty represents Chicago's best shot at perfection. Still, it's a lot to ask of the 24-year-old.

Jake Peavy: 1 in 1,600

He's pitched like his former All-Star self lately, but he didn't even get close to a perfect game in his 2007 Cy Young year.

Jose Quintana: 1 in 1,800

He gave up only one hit in seven innings against Cleveland earlier this month.

Gavin Floyd: 1 in 2,400

Not exactly a strikeout king, Floyd would need an insane amount of help from his defense. And a lot of luck.

Dylan Axelrod: 1 in 2,700

Given an infinite amount of mon-keys and infinite amount of typewriters, as the saying goes, one eventually will type the complete works of Shakespeare. Likewise, Axelrod probably needs thousands of starts, not the 25 or so he's likely to get this season, to be perfect.

1	Convince Bulls fans they should be hopeful for a series win over Brooklyn.	Kris Humphries has a rep for losing in court.	Defense wins championships ... uh, I mean defense gets to the second round.	Two words: Jokim Noah.	As Jay-Z would say, the Bulls got "99 Problems" but the Nets ain't one.	Wouldn't you rather lose to the Heat or Knicks?
2	What should the winner of the NHL's Presidents' Trophy receive?	The best record of the year. Ray-J, obvi.	A pound of that Presidential, duh. "winks at you"	The severed heads of the Sedin twins.	Each player gets a day in the White House. Lincoln's bedroom will never be the same.	The Presidents' Trophy, I would assume.
3	On the eve of the NFL draft, the Bears should be thinking that if they pick up Manti Te'o, it will be a mock draft.	... thinking offensive line. Ahem. THINKING OFFENSIVE LINE. LINEMEN. ON OFFENSE.	... making arrangements to distract the McCaskeys until the draft is over.	... focusing on getting their MAN, not their Manti. Leave catfish for cornmeal and MTV.	... expecting to find the next Urlacher.
4	What does Adam Dunn mean when he says his hitting struggles are "technical"?	They're foul.	That's baseball for "Lay off me, I'm Adam Dunn. What do you want?"	He "technically" can't hit the ball anymore.	He needs to hit ctrl-alt-delete on his season and then reboot to his 2010 self.	They're the opposite of the other kind of struggles. The ones that are, you know, not technical.
5	Why is Illinois going to play its 2013 homecoming game at Soldier Field?	They're playing the Huskies. Clearly, it's a dog-and-pony show.	Because apparently the school wants to give three-fourths of the Homewood-Flossmoor class of 2003 hangovers?	Who could turn down the chance to play on that fantastic sod?	Taylor Swift is there in August. They're hoping her success rubs off on them.	It's payback for all those awful games the Bears played in Champaign back in the day.

Let's bench the Ice Crew

Scott Bolohan

» redeyesports.com
» @scottbolohan

When Blackhawks defenseman Duncan Keith made his comments about a female reporter becoming the first woman ref, a lot of things weren't clear. It was an uncomfortable, awkward exchange resulting in Keith expressing his frustration in a bad way. Once he brought up the league's lack of female refs, he was being sexist and should be criticized.

But this was just a blip on the radar of sexism in sports. And it's finally gotten to me. Sexism is basically encouraged in the four major sports. Why wouldn't Keith make those comments when the Hawks employ the Ice Crew, the literal skating definition of the objectification of women?

Frankly, I've thought for a long time the Hawks should get rid of the Ice Crew. It makes me embarrassed when the crowd roars as those women take the ice.

To make it worse, the Ice Crew was added in recent memory, which isn't that different from giving a new team a racially insensitive name. We are supposed to be past these things. I mean, I can't imagine that having women in short skirts and halter tops is the most efficient way to clean the ice. It's purely for men's sexual enjoyment.

I can understand cheerleading and dance teams to an extent—at least that's a performance. But no one shovels ice for fun.

And for a franchise that was lauded for having Brent Sopel take the Stanley Cup to Chicago's Pride Parade, it's "Mad Men"-y of them to have women to ogle during a family-friendly event, perpetuating all sorts of stereotypes.

How do you explain that to your kid? It reinforces the idea that women aren't valued when it comes to sports. Just ask Dunes about that.

You can argue the Ice Crew exists because the fans enjoy it, but there are a lot of terrible things fans would enjoy. It doesn't make it right.

But now the Hawks can do something to make a real statement and put a stop to this. It could only help pave the way for the first female ref.

SCOTT BOLOHAN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

THE MOUTHWATCH

“Hockey is an emotional game and things are often said in the heat of the moment. I think this is what happened last night. I've moved on.”

—Radio reporter Karen Thomson, via Twitter, after her confrontation Monday with Duncan Keith. He was dismissive of Thomson's questions regarding a perceived penalty and later added, “We should get you as a ref maybe, eh? The first female referee. You can't play probably either, right? But you're thinking the game like you know it? OK, see ya.”

Simple. To the point.

According to ESPN, the name of the new college football playoff system will be called—wait for it—College Football Playoff. Kudos to the NCAA for not falling into the “Legends” and “Leaders” trap that plagued the Big Ten.

Till tweet do us part

According to ABC News, “Real Housewives of Atlanta” star Porsha Stewart found out via Twitter that her then-husband, former Bears quarterback Kordell Stewart, wanted a divorce. While he was in the next room. That's harsh, Kordell. Really harsh.

Round of applause

The Bears' Julius Peppers, Charles Tillman and Shea McClellin were honored as recipients of the Brian Piccolo Award on Tuesday. The club selects players who exemplify the courage, loyalty, teamwork, dedication and sense of humor of Piccolo, the Bears running back who died of cancer in 1970.

JULIAN BELL

Neighborhood: Lakeview

Sound: A soulful take on pop-rock

Influences: John Mayer, John Legend, Jimi Hendrix, Coldplay, Frank Ocean

Live show: An energetic effort to connect within the band and to the audience, says Bell, 22.

Claim to fame: Worked with Joe Jonas on the CW show "The Next;" made it to the blind audition round on "The Voice," but didn't get to audition because the teams were full

ABOVEWAVES

Neighborhood: South Loop

Sound: Incredibly catchy modern pop

Influences: Singer Ryan Greshock, 26, prefers not to pin AboveWaves to a particular genre or band but does name Bruno Mars, Maroon 5, Coldplay and Radiohead

Live show: "It's really polished; it's really tight," Greshock says. The band recently had its first Chicago show at Subterranean; its first-ever show was a SXSW showcase.

Claim to fame: Featured on sonicbids.com; worked with Mark Needham (Katy Perry, Pink, Neon Trees, Imagine Dragons)

THE ADDIES

Neighborhood: Little Italy/UIC

Sound: Beautiful toe-tapping rock-pop

Influences: The Strokes, The Black Keys, Jet

Live show: It can get rowdy. "Everybody tends to be drinking quite heavily," says singer/guitarist Kevin Kiley, 21, the lone Columbia College attendee in a band of UIC students. "We drink a little bit, but the crowd seems to be drinking together."

Claim to fame: Playing at Metro

SUNNIE STORM

Neighborhood: Roseland

Sound: Classic hip-hop that the 20-year-old rapper says also aims to put a positive spin on elements from trap music

Influences: Kendrick Lamar, Tito Lopez, Lauryn Hill, Tupac, MC Lyte

Live show: Very goofy and animated, Sunnie Storm says, featuring a wide variety of facial expressions.

Claim to fame: Coverage on whackstars.com and goill.net

MICHELE MCGUIRE

Neighborhood: West Lawn/Mount Greenwood native now living in Bucktown

Sound: Folk-country that nicely mixes sweetness and sorrow

Influences: John Prine, Bob Dylan, Laura Marling

Live show: Fun and peppered with stage banter, says the 24-year-old singer/songwriter, who's played guitar since she was 13. "We highly recommend drinking and dancing. Yes, always in that order."

Claim to fame: Playing Lincoln Hall; playing during "Bar Rescue" episode at Abbey Pub

DOZENS

Neighborhood: Wicker Park

Sound: Spot-on indie pop with EDM elements that singer/multi-instrumentalist Kyle Mann describes as a mix of Cut Copy and Hall and Oates

Influences: Twin Shadow, Beach Boys, New Order, Michael Jackson, Fleetwood Mac, James Blake, MGMT

Live show: The electronic sound on record becomes more of a raw, powerful rock show, Mann says.

Claim to fame: Performing at Taste of Chicago 2012, Metro, Lincoln Hall; featured on blog Listen Before You Buy

THE KUHLS

Neighborhood: Roscoe Village via Kansas City, Mo.

Sound: Hummable blend of classic rock and country. It's sometimes dubbed "prairie punk," says 24-year-old singer Renee Kuhl (pronounced "cool"), who fronts the five-piece band with her sister Grace.

Influences: Crazy Horse, Led Zeppelin, Janis Joplin, Pearl Jam, Alanis Morissette

Live show: "A lot of hair flipping," Renee Kuhl says. "And a lot of really loud guitar rock. We're girls, but we really like to kick ass."

Claim to fame: Headlining Metro and being featured in the Tribune

BIG PARAD

Neighborhood: Bucktown

Sound: Tight, deliberate, hard-hitting rock, formed around the concept of two guitars and drums without a bass

Influences: Queens of the Stone Age, The Raconteurs, Jack White

Live show: Extravagant and circus-themed, featuring marching band attire, female backup dancers in parade outfits and a confetti-shooting cannon barrel, which they shot off at Double Door.

Claim to fame: Reviews have been good for the band's debut video, "Walk in Place," but, says singer/guitarist Joe Shadid, 25, their claim "was [bleeping] blowing that cannon."

DVS JACKSON, ESQ.

Neighborhood: South Shore

Sound: Jazzy, lyrically precise hip-hop

Influences: KRS-One, Rakim, J. Dilla, Kendrick Lamar, Drake

Live show: "I act the fool," says the 38-year-old rapper, a poet who's not actually a lawyer and says he delayed releasing music for fear of being judged. "Primarily I'm there so I enjoy myself, and if you enjoy yourself as a result, that's great."

Claim to fame: Worked with Simeon Viltz of Chicago rap outfit the Primeridian

WHYSOWHITE

Neighborhood: North Center

Sound: Party-starting, lyrically playful jam session that guitarist Chris Miller, 24, says the eight-piece band calls "Chicago funk love."

Influences: The Roots, Cody Chesnutt, Beastie Boys

Live show: "Breathe when you can," Miller notes, "because we don't stop." That means a lot of dancing and music playing even when someone from the group is addressing the audience.

Claim to fame: Opening for Macklemore and Ryan Lewis (and Dessa and K. Flay) at SXSW; having an interview with them picked up on Jay-Z's Life and Times site; their self-titled album hitting the front page of Reddit, earning 100,000 plays overnight and support from as far as Paris and Australia; previously winning three battle-of-the-bands competitions

Tamberla Perry is a Lotto host by day and a Goodman Theatre star by night

By Julia Borcherts

FOR REDEYE

Sure, she's a WGN host for Illinois Lottery drawings and was recognized in 2011 as one of Chicago Magazine's "50 Most Beautiful Chicagoans"—but Tamberla Perry is more than just a pretty face.

You may also have seen the native Chicagoan—who grew up Marynook, Beverly and Chatham and now is a South Shore resident—in TV shows such as "Chicago Fire" and "Boss," where she played a recurring role as a Chicago alderman's wife. She also is a company member of African-focused theater company Mpaact and has appeared in "The Brother/Sister Plays" at Steppenwolf, "Race" at the Goodman and "Fedra: Queen of Haiti" as well as "Black Diamond" at Lookingglass, where her husband, actor Kevin Douglas, is a company member.

Now she's back on stage at the Goodman as the title character in "By the Way, Meet Vera Stark" by Pulitzer Prize-winner Lynn Nottage ("Ruined"), a comedy—with a message about race and marginalization—focusing on a fictional African-American actress in the 1930s who tries to make a name for herself by stealing small scenes in big movies. We called Perry in between rehearsals to get her take on the show, the Lottery and more.

JULIA BORCHERTS IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR

AT YOUR SERVICE

By the Way, Meet Vera Stark
Go: 8 p.m. Saturday through June 2 at the Goodman Theatre, 170 N. Dearborn St.
Tickets: $25-$81; 312-443-3800; goodmantheatre.org

Tamberla Perry stars in 'By the Way, Meet Vera Stark'

On the old Hollywood style in 'Vera Stark'

I love everything about the fashion and the glamour of that period. I am such a period person at heart; half the clothes in my closet are vintage. I do tons of consignment, thrifting, vintage shopping. So if Hollywood in the 1930s could be Hollywood today—honey, I would be fabulous every day.

Why 'Vera Stark' is still relevant

It's interesting; the plight of the black actress continues today. We may not necessarily be playing maids and cooks in everything, but our roles are limited and there about 800 of us going out for each of those roles.

What she learned while researching her character

This character is based off of Theresa Harris, a black actress from the period. Even though she played maids and cooks and confidantes of these white actresses in these movies, she knew how to get into a scene and take that scene and not necessarily steal the focus—but kind of steal the focus. She knew how to find her light and make that scene be about her versus just "Yes'm," and "No'm," and coming and going and bringing on some food and leaving.

Her biggest 'Boss' missed opportunity

I didn't have any scenes with Kelsey [Grammer]. I'm sure he saw my half-naked body several times in all of his scenes [laughs], but I didn't get to work with him.

On the South Side's best-kept secrets

We have some fantabulous Jamaican restaurants on the South Side. [Uncle] Joe's Jerk is one of them—it's a chain that we have over there and it's actually really, really good. Hyde Park, the Bronzeville area—just jewels of everything, from the cafes to the little restaurants. A lot of people don't know that there's an ice skating rink in the middle of the University of Chicago—Midway Plaisance—right down the street from where Barack Obama lives. And we have the beaches—I can walk to the beach or the golf course from my house.

Misconceptions people have about being an Illinois Lottery host

Number one is that it's rigged. Number two is that I get proceeds from the winners' money—that when people hit the jackpot, that the Lottery women get a cut of it. How crazy is that? [Laughs.]

The craziest encounter she's had with a stranger who recognized her as a Lottery host

At a funeral, this woman was walking up to view the body. She came up [to me] and she said, [growsl] "You didn't pull my numbers last night, girl," and then proceeded to go look at the body.

PATIO MAKEOVERS

By Lisa Arnett | REDEYE

Last week, you read up on 50 new patios, rooftops and sidewalk cafes debuting this season in our 2013 outdoor dining and drinking preview (find it online at redeyechicago.com/patios). To help pass the time until the warm weather sets in, here's the lowdown on seven existing outdoor spaces undergoing revamps. LMARNETT@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEEATDRINK

RM Champagne Salon 116 N. Green St. 312-243-1199

When its picturesque courtyard patio opened last fall, this West Loop lounge cemented its status as a destination for drinking bottles of bubbly under the stars. An earlier opening time—11 a.m. daily starting mid-May—has the potential to draw an earlier crowd for day drinking or soaking up some sun over a cup of coffee.

Sepia 123 N. Jefferson St. 312-441-1920

At this West Loop restaurant, sidewalk seating that previously hugged the curb is being moved closer to the building, new tables will seat 24 diners (up from 16) and the small (and easily windblown) umbrellas will be switched out with larger, sturdier models. The entire space should be in full swing by Memorial Day weekend.

Scofflaw

3201 W. Armitage Ave. 773-252-9700

In the rush to open its outdoor seating last year at the Logan Square bar, the owners opted to keep the same setup as predecessor Streetside. This season, they're keeping the same footprint but nearly doubling the capacity to 30 people, thanks to a mix of bench seating and metal chairs.

Japonais

600 W. Chicago Ave. 312-822-9600

The riverside cabanas at this River North classic aren't going anywhere, but new seating—bar-height communal tables and traditional dining tables—will make full diners more comfortable. Changes should be complete by early May.

Smoke Daddy

1804 W. Division St. 773-772-6656

This Wicker Park barbecue bar's recent expansion wasn't limited to the indoors; it also includes the addition of two 60-inch TVs and 30 more seats outside, including 10 at a new bar, all set to go this weekend, weather permitting.

Vertigo Sky Lounge

2 W. Erie St. 312-202-6060

The Dana Hotel's 26th floor lounge has shed its faux grass and added an outdoor bar and new seating, to be unveiled this weekend. On May 1, the bar will bump up its weekday opening time to 4 p.m. and offer snack deals (think $2 sliders and $5 sushi) from 4 to 7 p.m.

Old Oak Tap

2109 W. Chicago Ave. 773-772-0406

During the offseason, this popular bar and eatery added a permanent roof, windows and doors to cover part of its beer garden out front. They're calling it a lanai, as they do in Hawaii, and plan to swing open the doors when the temps top 60 degrees.

Panko Onion maki Sushi Dokku, 823 W. Randolph St. 312-455-8238

Vegetarian sushi belongs in the same place as vegetarian hot dogs and vegetarian cheeseburgers—the garbage can, as far as we're concerned. Why bother? That said, the Panko Onion at West Loop's Sushi Dokku (from the de cero and Grange Hall Burger Bar group) is the most interesting non-fish maki roll we've had in recent memory. This essentially is fried onion rings and garlic aioli in futomaki sushi form, with sweet, creamy and crunchy notes all in one bite. The white onions have a dual breading of panko and tempura batter, then are stuffed in rice with avocados and red onions, with microgreens atop. The ponzu on the side is nontraditional too: mirin and soy, but also orange juice and a splash of Sprite. $8. TRIBUNE

TV streaming service to face legal fights

The Wrap

Aereo announced Tuesday that it will expand May 15 to Boston, its first coverage area outside of New York City and a move that has caused more tension with the networks.

The company, a streaming service that captures live TV signals, plans to move to 22 other markets this year, including Chicago, Houston and Philadelphia. It relays ABC, NBC, CBS, Fox, the CW, Univision and PBS, among other networks available by antenna, but does not relay cable channels.

The expansion to Boston, where the company believes it can reach up to 4.5 million consumers, comes as it is locked in litigation with networks that say its use of their signals is stealing. Aereo, a private company, has not disclosed how many subscribers it has.

A top CBS spokesman responded to news of Aereo's expansion to Boston by tweeting Tuesday, "And we will be there to sue them."

"Stealing our signal will be found to be illegal in Boston, just as it will be everywhere else," Tweeted CBS executive vice president of communications Dana McClintock, a native of the Boston area. "Then again, if Aereo's business is as successful in Boston as it's been in NY, it has its own problems to deal with."

Aereo uses small antennae to transmit broadcast signals over the Internet to laptops, phones and tablets.

Beginning May 15, consumers who have preregistered with Aereo at its website will receive a special invitation to join. After May 30, membership will be available to others in the Boston market. The web site currently says Aereo is "coming soon to Chicago."

Aereo poses a threat to networks in part because unlike a TV outfitted with nothing but an antenna, it lets customers fast-forward through ads. That undercuts the traditional ad-sponsored TV model, which already is besieged by DVR viewing and Dish's ad-skipping AutoHop service.

'The Voice' coaches on chemistry, 'Idol' rivalry

The Wrap

"The Voice" works. From its personality-driven coaches to its spinning chairs and battle rounds, the NBC talent show is clicking with viewers. But the show risked it all this season when it played around with its coaches' panel.

"I don't think we were nervous," coach Adam Levine said of the transition after Christina Aguilera and Cee Lo Green decided to take a break from the show and were replaced by Shakira and Usher.

"We were kind of curious as to how the chemistry would be," he continued. "But, I think that we're beyond happy. It's obvious when you watch the show that the chemistry is there."

Levine probably shouldn't have spoken for everyone on the panel at NBCU's Summer Press Day in Pasadena on Monday. "I was a little nervous," country singer Blake Shelton said.

"I didn't know either of these two before, and the thing is, you can't fake chemistry," he added. "Whoever picked these two knew they weren't working with egos, and that's what makes it work."

For their part, Shakira and Usher pay respect to the show's success before they arrived. "They didn't need us for the show to work," R&B star Usher said. "I was very proud of what I saw before."

"There's something distinctive about this show," Shakira explained. "How real it is."

The fans have voted in favor of the show (and its recent changes) every week, which routinely registers more than 13 million viewers an episode—a figure that's been rising as of late. "American Idol," on the other hand, has been on a downward trend for several seasons now.

This past week, "Idol" attracted just under 12 million viewers and was beat by repeats of CBS's "Big Bang Theory" in the coveted 18-49 demographic. But it isn't "The Voice's" style to kick a competitor while it's down—they won't talk about "Idol" at all.

"We don't even consider them in meetings," executive producer Mark Burnett told reporters when asked about the state of "Idol."

"And most certainly we don't talk about them in the press," Levine added.

'Chicago Fire'

NBC's 'Chicago Fire' has kindled a following

Los Angeles Times

NBC's "Chicago Fire" didn't exactly generate a lot of heat when it launched last fall.

The drama about the truck and rescue squads of a fictional Chicago firehouse lacked the moody darkness, charismatic antiheroes and explosive violence of critical darlings such as "Breaking Bad," "Homeland," "Boardwalk Empire," "Dexter" and "Sons of Anarchy." The show's retro vibe and focus on heroism were decidedly more "old school" than "new cool."

There was more buzz for the show's 9 p.m. Wednesday rival "Nashville" on ABC. But as the season winds down, "Chicago Fire" quietly has emerged as one of the few bright lights in NBC's troubled prime-time lineup.

While "Nashville" has lost steam, "Chicago Fire" is averaging more than 8 million viewers a week, up from its premiere audience of 6.6 million, and its pairing with veteran "Law & Order: Special Victims Unit" has formed a solid two-hour block for the network.

NBC has not said whether any of its freshmen series will be back in the fall, but executive producer Dick Wolf has said, "We're very optimistic."

The momentum of "Chicago Fire" is particularly gratifying for Wolf: It marks a success unconnected to the "Law & Order" brand he created more than 20 years ago. And unlike "Law & Order," "Chicago Fire" focuses on the characters' personal lives.

"We have a very delicate balance between the action and soap opera," Wolf said. "The show is the purest example of retro TV, or comfort food."

The formula of "Chicago Fire" has been consistent: high-octane action sequences where lives are at stake mixed with volatile human drama. Lt. Matthew Casey (Jesse Spencer) has complex family issues and lingering feelings for his former fiancée.

Lt. Kelly Severide (Taylor Kinney) is recovering from a painkiller addiction. Paramedic Gabriela Dawson (Monica Raymund) is pinning after Casey even though she's romantically linked to trainee Peter Mills (Charlie Barnett). Paramedic Leslie Shay (Lauren German) is a lesbian who can't seem to cut ties with a former girlfriend.

Executive producer Matt Olmstead, the showrunner for "Chicago Fire," said of the characters: "These folks are together 24 hours on, 48 hours off. They're a dysfunctional family who are forced to get through it. Then there are these calls, which bring this spike of adrenaline, and everyone has to pull together."

Olmstead and the writing staff strive to give relatively equal weight to the characters in the large ensemble, which also includes Eamonn Walker, David Eigenberg and a handful of local actors. But the most prominent star, and the key ingredient behind the appeal of "Chicago Fire," Wolf said, is Chicago.

"This is America," he said. "If you set this show in Los Angeles, people would say, 'Oh, come on.' But this is about the heart of the country. It's real."

THIS WEEK'S TOP RELEASES

The Impossible

Naomi Watts and Ewan McGregor embrace their emotionally challenging roles in this account of a family's effort to survive after the Indian Ocean tsunami of 2004. If this film hadn't been based on a true story, it would seem impossible. There are some events that seem outlandish, but the only changes director Juan Antonio Bayona made to the story—other than not making the family Spanish—is the condensing of some of the timelines for dramatic effect. Even if the timelines had played out longer, there's enough power in the story that there wouldn't have been a dull moment. Bayona gets a terrific performance out of 16-year-old Tom Holland that reflects the perfect tipping point of a boy becoming a man, and that's where the heart of the film lies.

Extras: Audio commentaries, "making of" and casting segments

Promised Land

Matt Damon and Frances McDormand try to convince residents of a small community to lease their land to a gas company for deep drilling, while an environmental activist (John Krasinski) shows up with evidence of the disasters of past drillings. The film casts a relatively even light over the unwinnable choice many farmers face when they have to decide between two evils. What makes this movie is Damon, who effortlessly slips from a man of conviction to a man of the people.

Extras: Extended scenes, "making of" featurette

Gangster Squad

Director Ruben Fleischer breathed new life into the zombie genre by infusing comedy into his weird, quirky "Zombieland," where he successfully fused the contradicting elements of horror and hilarity. He's not so successful with a similar attempt to blend genres in "Gangster Squad," about a group of police officers trying to stop organized crime from taking over L.A. in the 1940s. His decision to take a modern approach to a 40s-style gangster story gives the film a jumbled feel.

The modern touches seem out of place while the mob story lacks energy.

Extras: "Tough Guys With Style" segment, commentary tracks, deleted scenes

RICK BENTLEY, THE FRESNO BEE

THREE TO PLAY

BY RYAN SMITH | FOR REDEYE

Kings Road
Facebook

Facebook's reputation as a ghetto of brain-dead casual games and cash-ins is mostly deserved, but "Kings Road" qualifies as a relatively successful attempt to draw in hard-core types accustomed to sticking to consoles and PCs. This dungeon crawler from Rumble Entertainment apes popular role-playing games like "Diablo" and "Torchlight," where the focus is on kicking orc ass while snatching cool-looking swords from the corpses of your enemies. Sure, the free-to-play model means that the game too often begs you to spend your cash on upgrades, but for fans of the click-and-loot genre, this still is a "Kings Road" worth traveling.

Guacamelee!
PlayStation 3, PS Vita

It may play a lot like the Nintendo classic "Metroid," but DrinkBox Studio's new action game contains more than enough salsa-flavored character to stand on its own. "Guacamelee!" stars a Mexican farmer-turned-luchador, Juan, who must save the President's daughter kidnapped by Carlos Calaca, the ruler of the dead intent on merging the Earth with the underworld. The task is accomplished by wrestling skeletons and leaping onto hard-to-reach ledges using special moves you acquire along the way (most notably the ability to transform into a chicken). With its vibrant folk-art style and brand of clever humor, "Guacamelee" works both as a charming homage to Mexican culture and as a heavy-hitting adventure.

Cut the Rope: Time Travel

iPhone/iPad

There's a reason "Cut the Rope" has evolved into an app-store phenomenon. It's so simplistic that the title sums up everything you do in the game, yet many of the puzzles remain legitimately challenging.

The third iteration of the series does little to change up the successful formula (spoiler alert: you'll be cutting more ropes!) but adds a bit more variety. Forget the time-traveling nonsense—the ancient world, Renaissance and other historical settings are little more than window dressing. The new twists come in the form of spinning blades, bombs and other obstacles in your way of feeding candy to the ever cutesy Om Noms over 90 devious levels.

'BAD BOYS'

SORRY: ... about casting Tea Leoni in the female lead. She was a bona fide snooze and made most of her scenes unbearable.

NOT SORRY: ... about blowing stuff up. From the club scene to the battle at the airfield, this is Bay doing what he does best.

1998
'ARMAGEDDON'

SORRY: ... about that cheesy-ass AMURRICA montage at the end where people come out of the storm cellars and the kid runs around with the flag.

NOT SORRY: ... about the animal cracker scene. A lot of teens learned a lot of important moves from Ben Affleck and Liv Tyler.

2001
'PEARL HARBOR'

SORRY: ... that we sat through 183 minutes of this.

NOT SORRY: ... about Ben Affleck looking dreamy in a uniform.

SORRY NOT SORRY!

Michael Bay
LOS ANGELES TIMES FILE

Michael Bay would never say anything bad about his movies ... would he?

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Michael Bay has no idea what you've been smoking. The "Armageddon" director said Tuesday in a post on his forum that his words were taken out of context. "I'm not in the slightest going to apologize for the third movie in my movie career, a film called 'Armageddon,'" he wrote. We're not quite sure how a quote like "I will apologize for Armageddon" can be taken out of context, but whatever. We've got some thoughts about what Bay should be apologizing for in some of his movies—and what makes them

2003
'BAD BOYS II'

SORRY: ... about the movie turning into "Escape from Cuba" at the end. It seemed like just an excuse to go film in a tropical location.

NOT SORRY: ... about the scene where Reggie comes to pick up Martin Lawrence's daughter. Hilarious, even if it's weird seeing Will Smith curse a lot.

2005
'THE ISLAND'

SORRY: ... this movie is so unmemorable, we confused it with the Leonardo DiCaprio joint "The Beach."

NOT SORRY: ... that ScarJo and Ewan McGregor make a pretty sizzling couple.

2007
'TRANSFORMERS'

SORRY: ... about Megan Fox's costumes effectively killing feminism.

NOT SORRY: ... about Shia LaBeouf becoming a man.

2011
'TRANSFORMERS: DARK OF THE MOON'

SORRY: ... about the title being really confusing for Pink Floyd fans.

NOT SORRY: ... about Chicago having a front-row seat to some pretty kickass explosions during filming.

Kids these days

“Here's some real talk from a new mother: Nobody told me it would be this hard.”

—Shakira, to usmagazine.com. “It takes a lot of energy from you. But I love it, I'm really enjoying every bit of it. It's just that it's not as idyllic as everybody tells you, but also not as horrible as everyone tells you.”

“If you're choosing to be an actor, you are probably choosing the most high-risk, tumultuous job you could get into.”

THE DIGIT

Yes, there will be another. A sequel to “Dodgeball: A True Underdog Story” is in the works, thr.com reports.

—Kate Hudson, making a less-than-airtight argument to RedEye's Matt Pais. Hudson's latest, “The Reluctant Fundamentalist,” opens May 3.

Lena Dunham
LOS ANGELES
TIMES FILE

Serious sex ed

As if the organization weren't controversial enough, Planned Parenthood will honor “Girls” creator Lena Dunham on Thursday at its annual gala, recognizing her “realistic and honest portrayal of the complex issues facing young people today,” nydailynews.com reports. Dr. Ruth and President Obama also will be there. Oh, what we'd give to be a fly on the wall for their conversations.

Rock meets scissors

Could there be a more fitting title for Dwayne “The Rock” Johnson's new movie than “Pain & Gain”? Johnson, who co-stars with Mark Wahlberg in the action flick opening Friday, tweeted Tuesday that he underwent surgery for an abdominal tear he suffered during his big WWE Wrestlemania bout April 7. “Superman is on the mend,” he tweeted.

Where's Witherspoon?

If you're expecting an apology tour from Reese Witherspoon after she and her husband were arrested over the weekend, you might have to wait. America's tarnished sweetheart has canceled scheduled appearances on “Late Night With Jimmy Fallon” and “Good Morning America,” according to thr.com and washingtonpost.com.
